The King Who Loved Clothes

1

Long ago there was a king. He was crazy about clothes. There was a big room for his coats and a big room for his hats.

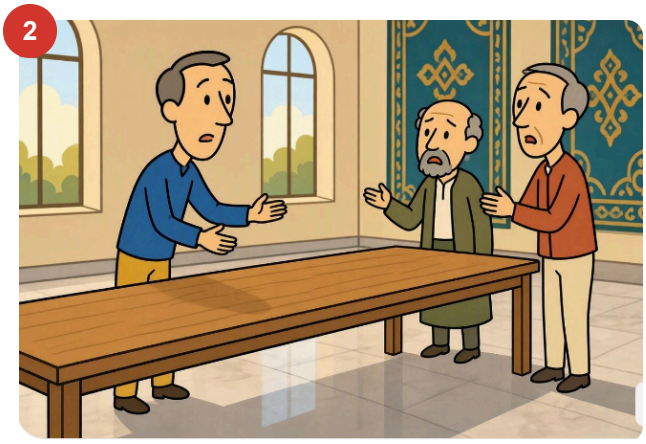

Every day the king was in front of the mirror. He was very happy.

One day there were two tailors in the palace. There was an empty box next to them.

“We have a magic cloth,” the tailors said. “Clever people see it. Stupid people see nothing!”

The king was very excited. There was a lot of money in his hand. “Make that cloth for me!”

2

Every day the tailors were at the table. But look! The table was empty! There was nothing on it!

The king’s old man was there. “Do you see the beautiful flowers?” the tailors said.

The old man was afraid. Clever people see the cloth! “Yes! I see them!” he said.

Every man said the same. Nobody was stupid, of course!

3

Then the king was in the street in his “new coat.” There were no clothes on him! But nobody said it.

There were lots of people in the street. “What a beautiful coat!” they said.

There was a small boy on his father’s shoulders. “Look where I’m pointing! He has no clothes!” the boy said.

Everybody was surprised. The king was red. Then there was a lot of laughing!

And the tailors? They were far from the city. There was a big bag of money with them.
