1 cage [keɪdʒ] n. — клетка
A box of metal bars that keeps an animal inside.
→ There was a tiger in the cage.

2 tiger [ˈtaɪgə] n. — тигр
A big wild cat with black lines on it.
→ In the morning there was a tiger in the cage.

3 goat [gəʊt] n. — коза, козёл
A farm animal that eats grass and climbs well.
→ An old goat called Boz came along the road.

4 jackal [ˈdʒækɔːl] n. — шакал
A wild animal like a small thin dog.
→ A thin little jackal came round the corner.

5 buffalo [ˈbʌfələʊ] n. — буйвол
A big strong animal that works on a farm.
→ First they asked the old buffalo in the field.

6 thirsty [ˈθɜːsti] adj. — испытывающий жажду
Needing to drink.
→ He was thirsty and he was very hungry.

7 hungry [ˈhʌŋgri] adj. — голодный
Needing to eat.
→ Sher agreed, because he was hungry.

8 stick [stɪk] n. — палка
A long thin piece of wood.
→ He pulled the door open with a long stick.

9 shade [ʃeɪd] n. — тень
A cool dark place out of the sun.
→ I give shade to everybody all day long.

10 shut [ʃʌt] adj./v. — закрытый, закрывать
Closed, so nobody can go in or out.
→ The door was here, and the door was shut!

11 lock [lɒk] v. — запирать
To close something so that nobody can open it.
→ He pushed the door with his nose, and it locked.

12 corner [ˈkɔːnə] n. — угол, поворот
The place where two walls or two roads meet.
→ A jackal came round the corner.

Useful phrases from the story

make a promise — дать обещание
But you made a promise!

have a good heart — быть добрым
Boz was not clever, but he had a good heart.

The Tiger Who Showed How It Happened

A man made a deep hole in the road and put a cage at the bottom of it. In the morning there was a tiger in the cage, and his name was Sher.

Sher pushed the door and hit the door, but the door did not open. He was thirsty and he was very hungry, and he was going to stay in that hole for ever.

Then an old goat called Boz came along the road. "Brother Boz!" called Sher. "Open this door! I will die in here!" "You will eat me," said Boz.

"Eat you? I have never eaten a goat in my life. I eat grass! Open the door, and I promise I will never touch you."

Boz was not clever, but he had a good heart, so he pulled the door open with a long stick. Sher walked out into the sun and looked at the old goat for a long time.

"Now," he said, "I am going to eat you." "But you made a promise!" said Boz. "I was in a cage. Nobody keeps a promise in a cage."

"Then we must ask somebody first," said Boz. "We will ask three of them. If all three say you can eat me, I will not run away."

Sher laughed and agreed, because he was hungry and he liked games.

First they asked the old buffalo in the field. "Men worked me for twenty years," the buffalo said. "Now I am old and they give me nothing. Eat him."

Then they asked the big tree by the water. "I give shade to everybody all day long," said the tree, "and they cut my branches. Eat him."

Then they asked the road. "Everybody walks on me and nobody says thank you," said the road. "Eat him."

Boz sat down and closed his eyes. Then a thin little jackal came round the corner with a very sad face. "Wait!" said Boz. "We must ask him too!"

So Sher told him the whole story. The jackal listened with his head on one side. "I am sorry," he said. "I am a stupid animal. Who was in the hole? The goat?"

"No! I was in the hole!" "Oh, I see. And the goat was in the cage." "The goat was on the road! I was in the cage! In the cage!"

"Please do not shout at me," said the jackal. "I only understand a thing when I can see it with my eyes. Where was this cage?"

Sher ran back to the hole, and the other two looked down at him from the road.

"Here!" he shouted. He jumped inside and turned round. "I was standing here, like this, and the door was here, and the door was shut!"

"Shut?" said the jackal. "Like this?" He pushed the door with his nose, and it locked.

"Now I understand everything," he said. "Come on, brother Boz. We are going the same way."

Boz still tells this story to everybody. And the jackal still says that he is the stupidest animal in the forest, and now nobody believes him.

