STORY 1 New Words • The Smell and the Sound

1 poor [puər] adj. — kambag'al
A poor person has very little money.
→ The poor man had no shoes and no coat.

2 smell [smel] n. / v. — hid; hidlamoq
A smell is something that you notice with your nose.
→ I love the smell of hot bread.

3 shout [ʃaʊt] v. — baqirmoq
To shout is to say something in a very loud voice.
→ He shouted my name from the door.

4 angry ['æŋgri] adj. — jahli chiqqan
When you are angry, you feel bad and you want to shout.
→ My sister was angry with me all evening.

5 pay [peɪ] v. — pul to'lamoq
To pay is to give money for something.
→ I paid for the tickets, so you can pay for the taxi.

6 coin [kɔɪn] n. — tanga
A coin is a small round piece of metal money.
→ She put the last coin in her pocket.

7 crowd [kraʊd] n. — olomon
A crowd is a big group of people in one place.
→ A crowd stood outside the shop and waited.

8 judge [dʒʌdʒ] n. — sudya
A judge is a person who decides who is right and who is wrong.
→ The judge listened to both men carefully.

9 shake [ʃeɪk] v. — silkitmoq
To shake something is to move it quickly up and down.
→ Shake the bottle before you open it.

10 fair [feə] adj. — adolatli, insofli
Something fair treats every person in the right way.
→ It is not fair! He got two and I got one.

The Smell and the Sound

In a small town, there lived a poor man. His name was Karim. He had no money, and he had very little food.

Every morning, Karim walked to work past a bread shop. The window of the shop was always open. Warm air came out of it, and with the warm air came the smell of fresh bread.

Karim could not buy the bread. So he stopped by the window for one minute. He closed his eyes and smelled the warm air. Then he ate his own dry piece of old bread and walked on. The smell made his old bread taste much better.

He did this every day for a month.

One morning, the baker came out and saw him. "Stop!" the baker shouted. "You are stealing from me!"

Karim was surprised. "I am not stealing," he said. "I never touch your bread."

"But you take the smell of my bread!" the baker said. "The smell is mine. I make it every morning. You must pay for it."

"Nobody pays for a smell," Karim said. "That is not fair."

The baker was very angry. "We are going to the judge," he said. "He will tell you that I am right."

A crowd of people followed them to the judge's house. Everybody wanted to hear this strange story.

The judge listened to the baker. Then he listened to Karim. He thought for a long moment. Then he asked, "Karim, do you have any money at all?"

Karim put his hand in his pocket and took out three small coins. It was everything he had.

The judge took the coins, closed his hand and shook it. The coins made a bright, happy sound. The room went quiet, and everybody listened.

"Baker," the judge said, "can you hear that?"

"Yes," the baker said. "That is the sound of money."

"Good," said the judge. He opened his hand and gave the three coins back to Karim. "This man has smelled your bread. You have heard his money. Now he has paid you."

The crowd started to laugh. The baker's face went red, and he walked home with nothing.

And Karim? He still stops by that window every morning.

Answer the questions.

1. What is this story about?

_____ a. How a clever judge stopped an unfair baker
_____ b. How a poor man learned to make good bread
_____ c. How a baker became rich in a small town
_____ d. How a man stole bread from a shop window

2. Why did Karim stop at the shop window every morning?

_____ a. Because he wanted to talk to the baker
_____ b. Because the smell made his own bread taste better
_____ c. Because he worked in the bread shop
_____ d. Because he bought three loaves of bread there

3. What did the baker want Karim to do?

_____ a. Clean the shop window every morning
_____ b. Stop walking on that street
_____ c. Give him money for the smell of the bread
_____ d. Bring the old bread back to the shop

4. Which of the following is true at the end of the story?

_____ a. Karim gave his three coins to the baker.
_____ b. The judge kept the coins for himself.
_____ c. Karim went home with his money, and the baker got nothing.
_____ d. The baker and Karim became good friends.

5. How did the judge “pay” the baker? Write your answer.

.....

.....

