Conditionals: zero, first, second, third and mixed

Understand it

Conditionals connect a condition and a result. The type depends on how real the situation is. Zero: always true. First: real and possible in the future. Second: imagined or unlikely now. Third: an imagined past that did not happen. Mixed: past condition, present result.

In IELTS, conditionals are the grammar of solutions (If governments taxed sugar, people would eat less) and of Part 3 speculation (What would happen if ...?).

The rules

- Zero: if + present, present. If you heat ice, it melts. (always true)
- First: if + present, will + verb. If prices rise, people will buy less. (real future)
- Second: if + past simple, would + verb. If I had more time, I would travel. (imagined, unlikely)
- Third: if + past perfect, would have + past participle. If he had studied, he would have passed. (the past that did not happen). Mixed: If I had studied medicine, I would be a doctor now.

All the words and forms you need

Zero	If + present, present
First	If + present, will / can / may + verb
Second	If + past, would / could / might + verb (If I were ...)
Third	If + had + past participle, would have + past participle
Mixed	If + had + past participle, would + verb (now)
Other condition words	unless · provided that · as long as · in case · suppose / supposing · otherwise
Formal	Were the government to ..., Should you need ..., Had they known ...

Where you use it

Writing: Solutions: If governments invested in public transport, fewer people would drive.

Speaking: Part 3: What would happen if ...? If everyone worked from home, cities would be quieter.

Reading: Conditional sentences in a text often show a possibility, not a fact.

More examples

- If you heat water to 100 degrees, it boils.
- If we don't reduce plastic use, the oceans will suffer.

- If public transport were free, fewer people would drive.
- If cities had planned better, traffic would not be so bad today.
- Unless schools teach money skills, young people will get into debt.
- Provided that it is affordable, solar energy could replace coal.

Common mistakes

Wrong	Right
