STORY 10 New Words • The Man Who Could See the Future (Part 2)

1 roof [ruːf] n. — крыша
The top of a house.
→ The robber lay flat on the roof.

2 hole [həʊl] n. — дыра, отверстие
An open space in something.
→ He lay next to the smoke hole and listened.

3 dish [dɪʃ] n. — блюдо
Food that is cooked and brought to the table.
→ Nodira picked up the first dish.

4 cave [keɪv] n. — пещера
A big hole in a hill or a mountain.
→ He ran up the old road and into the cave.

5 lip [lɪp] n. — губа
One of the two soft parts around your mouth.
→ He went back to the cave with white lips.

6 lamb [læm] n. — ягнёнок; баранина
A young sheep, or the meat of a young sheep.
→ It was a whole lamb with rice.

7 knock [nɒk] v. — стучать
To hit a door with your hand so people know you are there.
→ He climbed down and knocked on the door.

8 map [mæp] n. — карта
A drawing that shows you where a place is.
→ Here is a map.

9 half [hɑːf] n. — половина
One of two equal parts of something.
→ The king gave him half of the gold.

10 robber [ˈrɒbə] n. — разбойник, грабитель
A person who takes other people's things.
→ The youngest robber lay on the roof.

11 believe [bɪˈliːv] v. — верить
To think that something is true.
→ He was an old man, and he did not believe in magic.

12 flat [flæt] adj. — плашмя, плоский
With the whole body or side on something.
→ The robber lay flat on the roof.

Useful phrases from the story

knock on the door — стучать в дверь
Ten minutes later somebody knocked on the door.

in the morning — утром
Take it to your king in the morning.

The Man Who Could See the Future (Part 2)

The king had lost his gold, and the whole town believed that Sardor could see the future. Sardor knew he could not. He had three months, and then he would lose his head.

That first evening he sat at his table and waited for his food.

Above him, the youngest robber lay flat on the roof next to the smoke hole. He could see nothing down there, so he listened with all his ears. Nodira picked up the first dish.

She put it on the table in front of her husband. "Here is the first one," said Sardor happily.

The young robber came off that roof like a bird. He ran out of the town, up the old road, and into the cave.

"He knows!" he said. "I was on his roof for one minute! He said, here is the first one! He was talking about me!" The leader looked at him for a long time.

"You are young and you are stupid," he said. Then he turned to the second robber. "You go tomorrow."

The next evening the second robber lay in the same place, with his ear over the smoke hole. Nodira put down the second dish. "Here is the second one," said Sardor.

The second robber did not wait for more. He went back to the cave with white lips. "He said it about me! He counted me! He said the second one!"

Now the leader was not laughing either. He was an old man, and he did not believe in magic. "Tomorrow night I will go myself," he said. "I will hear this with my own ears."

So on the third night the leader climbed onto the roof himself. He put his face over the smoke hole and waited.

Under him, in the kitchen, Nodira lifted the biggest dish of all. It was a whole lamb with rice, and she carried it with two hands. "And here," said Sardor, "is the biggest one!"

The leader shut his eyes. Then he climbed down and knocked on the door. Sardor jumped. Nobody knocks on a poor man's door at night.

"Do not open it," said a voice outside. "We know that you know. You have counted us for three nights." Sardor looked at his wife. She put her hand over her mouth.

"Say nothing," the voice went on. "Here is a map. Your gold is in the cave above the old road, under the stones at the back. Take it to your king. But do not tell him our names."

Something white came under the door. Then there were feet in the road, and then there was nothing. Sardor picked up the map. Then he sat down, because his legs were not working very well.

In the morning he took the king and his men up the old road to the cave. They moved the stones at the back. Every bag of gold was there. The king looked at Sardor for a long time.

"Three months," he said. "You asked me for three months, and you did it in three days." "It was a hard job," said Sardor.

The king gave him half of the gold, and Sardor went home a rich man. He never worked again, and he never told anybody about the horse in the river.

