From Field to T-Shirt

Cotton is one of the most important products in Uzbekistan. It is grown in the south, and in autumn it is harvested, often by machines. The white fibers are carefully collected and sent to factories.

In the factory the raw material is cleaned and turned into thread. After that, the thread is made into cloth on big machines. Then the cloth is cut and sewn. Many T-shirts and jeans are made from it.

A big part of the cotton is exported to other countries, and a lot of finished clothes are imported back. When you look at the label on your T-shirt next time, think about the long way it has traveled: from a field to your wardrobe.
