Everyday Gadgets

Today many gadgets are used every day. Smartwatches are worn by millions of people, and they are used for counting steps and answering calls. Drones are used for taking photos, and in some countries they are even used for delivery.

The first smartphone was sold in 1994, but it wasn't as smart as ours. It was big, it wasn't connected to the internet, and it was used mainly for calls and notes. Many old gadgets, like the cassette player, aren't used anymore.

New devices are made in factories around the world, and most of them are controlled by apps. Are your gadgets user-friendly? Do you think they will be used in ten years, or will they be out of date?
