At the Party

Madina is at a party and she doesn't know anybody. She sees a girl next to the juice table and decides to start a conversation. “It's a nice party, isn't it?” she says. “Yes, it is,” the girl answers with a smile.

“You're new here, aren't you?” the girl asks. “Yes, I am. I came with my cousin. You don't live near here, do you?” “No, I don't. I live in the old town. You like music, don't you?” “I love it! You play the guitar, don't you?” “How do you know?” “You have guitar fingers.”

They laugh. “By the way, that's a lovely scarf, isn't it?” Madina says. They talk for an hour and exchange numbers. Small talk can start a real friendship, can't it?
