Museum Rules

Today our class is visiting the national museum. At the entrance there are many signs. We're supposed to show our tickets and scan our bags. A guard in a blue uniform stands next to the metal detector.

“You're not supposed to take photos with a flash,” he says, “and you shouldn't touch the exhibits.” Then he looks at our backpacks. “You'd better leave them in the lockers, or you'll have to carry them all day.” We listen carefully.

The museum closes at six, so we'd better hurry. Inside, it's a quiet zone, and everybody is whispering. I was supposed to bring a notebook, but I forgot it. My friend smiles and gives me a page from hers. It's going to be a good visit.

WORD HELP

scan — сканировать
metal detector — металлодетектор
locker — шкафчик
guard — охранник
quiet zone — зона тишины
exhibit — экспонат

Read it aloud two times. Then close the page and tell your partner three things you remember.
