going to and will: what Murphy does not tell you

Day 2 · Grammar beyond Murphy

Murphy first
Murphy red, Unit 26 (pages 62–63): going to. Do 26.1, 26.2 in class, 26.3 at home. Units 27–28 (pages 64–67): will, I'll. Do 28.1 in class, 27.2, 28.3 at home. 28.4 is for fast students on Day 3. This file adds five things the book does not explain. (Murphy Unit 25, the present continuous for the future, is used here as a short add-on.)

1 · Fixed arrangements: the present continuous

I am meeting Ali at six. We are leaving on Friday. My parents are coming tonight.
With a time and a person or place that is already fixed. going to works here, too. (This is Murphy Unit 25; read it if you want more.)

2 · "gonna" and "wanna": how people really say it

I'm going to → I'm gonna /ˈgʌnə/ going to leave → gonna leave Write going to. Say gonna in a film and in a quick conversation. Not for "going to the shop": that is a place, no gonna.

3 · will for promises, offers and refusals

Promise: I will call you tonight. Offer: I'll carry your bag.
Refusal: I won't tell anybody. The door won't open.
Prediction with an opinion: I think it will rain. I don't think he will come. (not: I think it won't...)

4 · Future time words

tomorrow · tonight · next week · next year · soon · in two days · in 2030 · in a few minutes in two days = after two days from now. I'll call you in an hour.
Do not say ✗ after two days. Say in two days.

5 · The Russian trap

«Я буду смотреть фильм» → I am going to watch a film. / I will watch... (not ✗ I will to watch).
«Я иду в кино» can be *I'm going to the cinema (a place) or I'm going to watch a film (a plan).
«Если он придёт, я скажу» → If he comes, I'll tell him. (Week 15: no will after if.)
