Unit 8 · Countable / uncountable · some · Would you like...?

Name _____

THE BIG IDEA

Some things we can count (an apple, two apples). Some things we cannot count (milk, rice, bread). That changes which small word we use.

Одни вещи можно посчитать (яблоко, два яблока), другие нельзя (молоко, рис, хлеб). От этого зависит, какое слово мы ставим.

How we build it

WHICH	PATTERN	EXAMPLE	РУССКИЙ
Countable	a / an · one thing · numbers · plural	a melon · an onion · two melons	дыня · лук · две дыни
Uncountable	some · thing (no a, no -s)	some bread · some milk · some pasta	хлеб · молоко · макароны
I want	I'd like · a / an / some · food	I'd like some pasta.	Я бы хотел макароны.
Offer	Would you like · some · food?	Would you like some water?	Хотите воды?
Answer	Yes, please. / No, thank you.	Yes, please.	Да, пожалуйста.

When we use it

Order food politely: I'd like some bread, please.
Вежливо заказать еду.

Offer food: Would you like an apple?
Предложить еду.

Count what we can: two apples. Measure what we can't: a glass of milk.
Считать и мерить.

REMEMBER

Can you count it? One melon, two melons → countable. Bread, milk → uncountable (no a, no -s).

RUSSIAN AND ENGLISH

Russian: «хлеб», «молоко» also have no plural, but English has MANY more: water, rice, pasta, meat, cereal. 'Would you like...?' is polite: «Хотите...?»

Watch out! We often say...

~~I'd like a bread.~~	I'd like some bread.
~~Two breads.~~	Two pieces of bread.
~~I want some melon, please.~~	I'd like some melon, please.

EASY TRICK

Test: can you put a number in front? two apples ✓ · two milks ✗ → say «a glass of milk», «two pieces of bread».

Try it! Circle the right answer

1. I'd like ___ onion. (a / an)
2. I'd like ___ bread. (a / some)
3. Would you ___ some water? (like / to like)
4. Is «milk» countable? (yes / no)
5. two ___ (melon / melons)
6. Would you like some pasta? ___ (Yes, please. / Yes, I'd.)

Answers: 1 an · 2 some · 3 like · 4 no · 5 melons · 6 Yes, please.